

Dr. Basu's projects are in the area of computer simulation to model problems in cardiovascular disease risk reduction, specifically creating computer simulations and large-scale data analysis projects for type II diabetes and hypertension control. Students with a strong background in statistics and computer science and/or systems engineering are encouraged to apply.